Committee to research oppression

by Linda Hoy
wire editor

A University-wide committee will be formed to consider the possibility that faculty members work in an oppressive climate.

The Faculty Welfare Committee (FWC) of the Faculty Senate recommended yesterday that the Committee on Committees appoint an ad hoc committee to develop ways to measure how faculty view the University working climate and report back by March 15, 1988.

Concern about the faculty working climate arose in the Senate last month when member Ann-Marie Lancaster said the atmosphere between University faculty and administrators is oppressive.

The Senate Executive Committee met Oct. 8 and requested that the FWC consider the concern raised about "oppression" and report back yesterday.

Faculty Senate Chair Ralph Wolfe said there have been "several concerns expressed publicly and privately to all of the three officers of the Senate."

The other two Senate officers are Vice Chair Bartley Brennan and Secretary Genevieve Stang. Brennan has spoken out in the Senate about individuals who have received threats from administrative officials.

Wolfe said, "Within the last five years faculty members seem to perceive an aggravation of concerns that originate in various levels of the University."

He said the concerns, which range from the departmental level to the University level, are campus-wide and not related to any one College.

Philip Mason, executive assistant to University President Paul Olscamp, said he is "absolutely baffled on the issue of oppression."

Mason said his office has never received any faculty complaints about this.

"The whole discussion at this point has been very undefined and vague," he said.

Mason said after Lancaster's comments on the Senate floor about the oppression of faculty, he called her and set up a meeting to see if there was any way he could help.

Lancaster canceled the meeting which has been rescheduled, he said.

Ng capitalizes on experience

by Caroline Langer
city editor

Democratic mayoral candidate Patrick Ng plans to draw on his financial background and his training as a civil engineer if he is elected.

During his six years on city council, he chaired the Finance Committee and said the budget showed a $750,000 surplus when he left in 1983.

Although Ng said income tax revenue has been increasing every year, the budget now "is in sad shape."

"If you keep spending more money than you're taking in, then you're in trouble," he said.

He wants to review all budget items because "priorities are completely screwy."

For example, Ng believes it was a mistake for the city to extend North College Drive, near the airport, because it is not highly used. His choice would have been to improve Thurstin Avenue, going north from Ridge Street to Poe Road since it is a high traffic area with no substantial sidewalks and the pavement is falling apart.

His last action as Ward 2 council member was to improve Manville Avenue from Napoleon Road to where it becomes Thurstin Avenue up to Ridge Street, including the cross walk signals at the East Wooster Avenue intersection, he said.

Because asphalt was cheaper than concrete, he chose to use this material for paving the sidewalks.

If elected, Ng plans to improve the transportation system within the city. Because of his engineering experience, he believes he can save tax dollars by curbing the need for outside consultants.

In order to save tax money, Ng said he intends to "look for the least expensive, most effective way to solve problems."

By prioritizing items on the budget, Ng believes he can eliminate unnecessary expenses without cutting services.

"Once you get the financial situation into shape, everything else falls into place," he said.

NFL lockout riles players

(AP) — Many striking NFL players who returned to work yesterday were angry and bitter after management told them they couldn't play or be paid their normal salaries this week.

"You bet it makes me mad," said Stan Brock, an offensive tackle for the New Orleans Saints.

"It was ludicrous to reject us coming in," fumed Ken Clarke, a defensive lineman for the Philadelphia Eagles.

Striking players from all but two of the NFL's 28 teams reported to work yesterday after their union ended its 24-day walkout. But the players left their teams again after management told them they would only be paid per diem expenses this week because they missed the Wednesday afternoon reporting deadline.

Clarke said the decision showed "management doesn't care about the players or the public."

"What's the difference if it (the reporting deadline) was 1 p.m. yesterday or 1 p.m. today," he said. "We can still suit up and play."

Brock also blasted the owners, who are planning to stage replacement games for the third straight week.

"If they were really interested in putting the best guys on the field, 24 hours wouldn't make that much difference," he said.

Miller aims to review budget

by Caroline Langer
city editor

Republican mayoral candidate, Edwin Miller, plans to use his business experience and an increase in public participation to run the city.

A councilman-at-large since 1984, Miller intends to review past budget allocations and publicize them in order "to prove to citizens that we have been good caretakers and spenders of the money that comes in."

Year-end carry-over, money left in the budget after the fiscal year, has been decreasing in the last several years, brought about by "skyrocketing" costs such as liability insurance and decreases in federal and state funding, Miller said.

In order to keep the city budget "in the black with reasonable carry-over at the end of the year," Miller aims to study the city budgeting situation in depth, with the aid of a Blue-Ribbon committee.

The committee, made up of citizens who are experts in the field of finance, would make recommendations to city administration and council regarding what will be funded and how, he said.

He is taking steps to make the process for receiving county funds more consistent in order to make budgeting easier, he said.

Committees would also be used by Miller to improve student renter/resident homeowner relations by bringing together student leaders, representatives from University administration and city administration "to set guidelines on how we are to live together as good neighbors."

Loud parties, litter, parking on grass and health-code violations were common complaints residents made about renters, he said. "We can solve an awful lot of this by talking."

Tenants with housing problems would also have a forum to address, according to Miller's design.

"We need to have a source to which students can go if they have landlord problems. We need them to define the problems," he said.

By using business principles, inciting citizen participation in government and by utilizing their expertise, Miller believes

Banner to hang for rape victims

by Debbie Rogers
staff reporter

The purpose of Rape Awareness Week is to make people notice that rape is always a problem, said Audra Wilson, a coordinator for Women for Women.

"It (rape) seems like an issue that only comes up when it happens. We just allow things to go until it happens," Wilson said. "What we want to do is increase awareness."

To create awareness, Women for Women will be hanging a banner in the Union Oval, Oct. 19-23. Wilson said one red ribbon will be hung on the banner for every woman that calls the center telling that she was raped and then 10 more will be added because for every rape reported, there are 10 more unreported.

"Really, what we would like to say is that we're not getting any response," she said.

Wilson said the calls are proving that many rapes go unreported

News in Brief

Sig Eps win national award

Out of 240 chapters nationwide, the University's Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity was recently chosen as the most outstanding.

The Sig Eps have received the Buchanan Cup for the past two consecutive two-year terms at its national convention.

The Buchanan cup was named in honor of Edwin Buchanan, who was the grand national treasurer of Sigma Phi Epsilon for 34 years.

"In order for our chapter to obtain this award, we had to excel in 10 main areas," Scott Deakon, president of the fraternity, said. "Since the award is only given out every two years, having the cup in our possession for four years means a lot to the chapter members."

Wayne Colvin, Director of Greek Life said, "Sigma Phi Epsilon has always had a strong chapter, nationally and locally, and their achievement of winning the Buchanan cup for the past two consecutive terms shows the overall quality of this chapter."

Nobel prize now taxed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nobel Prizes are worth $340,000 in cash, but that won't buy as much as it used to. The awards given to U.S. residents now are subject to federal tax.

As part of the big tax overhaul enacted last year, Congress repealed the provision that excluded from tax any prize awarded for certain charitable, scientific or literary achievement. The exclusion was available so long as a recipient had not applied for the award.

Media distorts Gulf war

by Tracy Richards
reporter

"The U.S. media has given Iraq a bad rap," said Marshall Wiley, president of the U.S.-Iraq Business Forum and member of the board of directors to the Egypt-U.S. Business Council.

Wiley and Iman Abdelmoneim Khattab, of the Islamic Center of Greater Toledo, spoke on campus Wednesday, and their lectures focused on United States' economic policies and risks in the Persian Gulf.

Khattab is secretary-general of the Council of Imams in North America.

Wiley said he believes the Persian Gulf struggle affects all countries, not just Iran and Iraq.

"Oil is our backbone. We import more and more of it each year. Without it we would have almost no energy," he said.

Wiley also said oil in the Middle East can be produced at a 50 cents a barrel, 1 percent of the cost of any other energy supply in the U.S.

He said he believes the U.S. should remain involved in the Gulf situation.

"We have the technological advantage," he said. "The risk factor is small."

He also emphasized that it is not in the best interest of the U.S. to allow Iran to spread its influence throughout the Gulf.

"The U.S. role should be to try and contain Iran's power to their own country," he said.

Khattab agreed that the U.S. media's interpretation of the Gulf situation is incorrect. Khattab said he greatly disagrees with the common belief that the Iran-Iraq war is a religious one.

"The division in the Middle East is not religious," Khattab said. "The factors underlying war in the Gulf could be economic, power or just greed, but not religion."

Khattab was asked at the end of the lecture about possible solutions to end the Iraq-Iran war.

"There is no easy answer. The Muslims must look at the Koran as a constitution."

The Koran is the sacred book of the Islam religion.

Khattab answered questions about the effects of bad relations between the U.S. and certain Middle Eastern countries on American Muslims with a story.

"Last month I was visited by the FBI and the Secret Service at the Islamic Center. They had discovered that I had spent some time in Libya and were curious to know if, perhaps, I had any interest in having the President assassinated," he said.

"I replied, 'I have been in the United States for six years. If I had any interest in assassinating the President, I certainly would have done it six years ago.'"

The results from one disastrous flight—this egg became scrambled.

Egg, sculpture project makes Art 112 time fly

by Judi Kopp
chief copy editor

Was it a bird? A plane? Superman? No—but it was certainly "egg-citing." Students in Art 112, three-dimensional foundations, were given a simple assignment, Julie Schnell-Madden, instructor of the class, said.

The project was to create a contraption that could be dropped off Doyt Perry Stadium, fall to the ground in a graceful way and protect its cargo—an egg.

"The assignment was to create a flying, gliding, dropping vessel that had to be as much sculptural as functional," she said. "Creating a piece of sculpture was the most important (part of the project)."

"The students were pretty much on their own—the projects could be any size or material. They had to make a container for the egg and sort of 'seatbelt' it into place," she said. "I provided the eggs—to make sure none of them were hard-boiled."

Students could get up to five bonus points for their projects flights, she said.

"You can get three extra points for the egg landing intact and two points for the project's 'flyability'—distance, aerobatics and aesthetics," she told the class.

Leura Gallat, freshman graphic design major, said it took about six hours to finish her project.

"I tried to fly it yesterday and it sort of glided," she said. "I figure if the egg is going to break, it'll do it when she (Schnell-Madden) throws it."

"The Egg Beast," masterminded by Art Mormile, a freshman graphic design major, took about five hours to make, and is made of parachutes, styrofoam, wood and "a little prayer," he said.

When the last project had been thrown off of the stadium a grand total of 14 eggs survived the ordeal.

There were only four kamikaze eggs.

Check writer jailed

by Jared O. Wadley
copy editor

A woman from Weston is in the Wood County Jail after she was arrested Wednesday at 1:31 p.m. and charged with passing a bad check to a local business.

Claudia Casturenia, 12673 Wingston Rd., also admitted to issuing bad checks to 11 businesses.

An employee of the Book Stop, 188 S. Main St., told the police she received a check, written by Casturenia, marked "account closed" by Toledo Trust.

The bad check for $20 had been written Sept. 11.

The complainant said she sent two letters to the defendant requesting restitution, but did not receive a reply.

After the Wood County Sheriff's Office obtained a bench warrant from the Bowling Green Municipal Court, Casturenia was arrested.

Due to a probation violation and the new charges, Casturenia was placed in jail in lieu of bonds totalling $13,000 with 10 percent not applicable.

After she was read her rights, Casturenia signed a written waiver admitting to writing the bad checks to the Book Stop and other businesses.

School worker robbed

by Jared O. Wadley
copy editor

The city police department is investigating the theft of wallet from the Bowling Green Junior High School, 215 W. Wooster St.

A complainant reported Tuesday at 3:04 p.m. that she walked into Room 212 at the school and observed a person in the area.

The suspect was identified as a 6-foot, 180 lb white male between 35-40 years old. He has a moustache and wore a tan, tweed golf hat.

The suspect said "maintenance" or "just maintenance" and walked out of the room. The complainant found her desk drawer open and her wallet missing.

The wallet contained a personal check for $12, five credit cards, two blank checks, bank card, driver's license and two insurance cards.

Wednesday at 9:55 a.m., the school secretary found the wallet in a stack of books in a classroom. A small amount of change was missing, but the other items were intact.

The principal notified other schools about the incident.

A speech therapist for the Bowling Green School system also reported Wednesday that $40 cash had been taken from her purse.

No suspects have been named.

Contras seek cease-fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The political directorate of Nicaragua's contra rebels offered yesterday to go to Managua for direct talks with the leftist Sandinista government to arrange a cease-fire by a Nov. 7 deadline.

The surprise announcement, made at a brief Capitol Hill news conference, means that "we are starting today the hardball game" in testing Sandinista commitment to a five-nation peace accord signed Aug. 7, said Alfredo Cesar, a member of the directorate of the Nicaraguan resistance.

"So far the Sandinistas have been able to comply with the easy part of the plan," by reopening some news media outlets and taking other steps required by the peace plan, Cesar said.

Another member of the directorate, Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, read a statement saying the group would "send to Managua a delegation at the highest level to demand of the Sandinista front a direct dialogue with the resistance, to lead to an immediate cease-fire as is contemplated in the peace agreement."

Chamorro said the leaders of the four other Central American countries that signed the accord had been briefed on the offer, and all "told us of their decision to support it."

The statement said that the resistance "does not embrace the amnesty" offered by the Sandinistas or the current political process in Nicaragua.

"Rather, it makes an extra effort" toward a cease-fire that could enhance the peace process and stop bloodshed in the country," Chamorro said.

The group has asked Nicaraguan Cardinal

Miguel Obando y Bravo, a leading critic of the Managua regime, to serve as an intermediary in arranging the trip and setting up the talks.

Adolfo Calero, another contra leader, said the trip could not be made until the Sandinistas approve of it.

The Sandinistas have in the past steadfastly objected to direct talks with the rebels, saying they are creatures of U.S. policy and therefore any talks should be with the United States. The United States has refused such a course.

But the contra leaders noted that leaders in Guatemala and El Salvador are talking directly with the rebel groups in their countries, and said the government of Nicaragua should do the same.

"If they don't change their mind, they will be responsible for the failing of the peace process in Central America," Chamorro said.

Stark reports outline details

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Iraqi missile attack on the USS Stark could have been prevented had the frigate's top officers properly done their jobs, but the crew reacted heroically after the attack to save the ship from a terrible fire, Navy reports concluded yesterday.

The May 17 attack in the Persian Gulf killed 37 sailors and touched off a still-unresolved fight between President Reagan and Congress over Reagan's policy of placing 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers under the American flag and escorting them with Navy ships.

The conclusions about the Stark attack were contained in a pair of reports provided to the House Armed Services sea-power subcommittee.

One report was prepared by a commission appointed to assess the "survivability" of frigates such as the Stark. The second, by a panel chaired by Rear Adm. Grant Sharp, was an investigation into why the Stark failed to defend itself.

The Stark was attacked at mid-evening by the pilot of an Iraqi F-1 fighter plane who fired two French-made Exocet missiles. Both hit the ship, but only one exploded.

There had not been any previous attacks on U.S. ships and the Iraqi plane was presumed to be "friendly." Iraq had admitted the attack and said it was due to mistaken identity, an explanation accepted by the United States.

Much of the information in the Sharp report has been previously detailed in public, because it was the basis for disciplinary actions against some Stark officers.

But the final report paints a detailed picture of a fighting ship that wasn't ready to fight despite warnings from higher U.S. authorities about the possibility of "indiscriminate attacks" in the war-torn gulf.

Cain's hit by local boycott

TOLEDO (AP) — A coalition of black leaders yesterday called for a boycott of a potato chip company they said has been discriminating against blacks in northwest Ohio.

"We have decided not to participate further in our own economic exploitation by allowing our money to work where we cannot work," said the Rev. Floyd Rose, head of the Coalition of Economic Justice and former president of the Toledo-area chapter of the NAACP. "Money that is spent by us for us must come back to us through increased employment of us."

At a news conference at the Baptist Family Church, Rose said 28 of 30 stores in predominantly black areas of Toledo have signed cards pledging not to stock or sell Cain's Potato Chips and Snack Division products during the boycott.

Cain's Potato Chips, which was bought by Borden, Inc., for $55 million on Aug. 31, has not hired a black worker at its distribution center and warehouse in Toledo since 1981, and no blacks have worked for the company in Toledo since 1983, he said.

He also said Cain's has no black workers at its potato chips factory in Bowling Green.

About 30 people work at Cain's Toledo warehouse and about 70 others work at the Bowling Green plant.

Rose said he will meet with Allan Miller, Borden's senior vice president and chief administrative officer, today in Toledo.

"I want to make it clear that the boycott is still on and will remain on until such time as we have reached an agreement," Rose said. "We believe that negotiations are preferable to litigation or public confrontation."

"We spend in this community upwards of $350 million a year. There's no reason why we ought to beg anybody for anything," he said.

News Briefs

Italian airliner crashes

COMO, Italy (AP) — An Italian airliner carrying 37 people on a flight from Milan to West Germany crashed in the foothills of the Italian Alps during a heavy rainstorm, authorities said.

There was no word from the crash site on whether there were any survivors.

Spokesmen for two fire departments conducting search efforts in the area near Lake Como in northern Italy confirmed the plane had gone down, but said they could not pinpoint the crash site.

Air traffic controllers lost contact with Flight 460 of the state-run Alitalia subsidiary ATI about 7:30 p.m. (2:30 p.m. EDT), 15 minutes after it had taken off from Milan's Linate Airport for Cologne, West Germany, said airline spokesman Roberto Panico.

The plane was carrying 34 passengers and three crewmembers, Panico said.

Kuwait oil terminal hit

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A medium-range Iranian missile slammed into Kuwait's main oil loading terminal yesterday, setting a supertanker ablaze but causing no harm to U.S.-flagged ships nearby, officials and shipping experts said.

Shipping experts said they thought the missile was a Chinese-made Silkworm. If that is confirmed, it would be the first time Iran has used a Silkworm missile against a ship.

The 275,937-ton Liberian-flagged Sungari was hit in the starboard side at about 5:04 a.m., said shipping sources who were in contact with Kuwait.

Dog owners not guilty

DAYTON (AP) — A jury yesterday found the owners of two pit bull dogs innocent of involuntary manslaughter in the death of a physician who was mauled as he ran screaming from the couple's home.

The verdicts in the case against Joetta Darmstadter, 32, and Wilbur Rutledge, 34, came after 5½ hours of deliberation Wednesday night and yesterday by jury of seven women and five men. The couple had been charged in the April 6 attack by two pit bulls that killed Dr. William Eckman, 67, of suburban Kettering at the couple's north-side house.

Penn. lotto tops record

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A lottery jackpot of $46 million, the largest in the nation's history, can be claimed by the owner of the only winning ticket sold, Pennsylvania Lottery officials said yesterday.

A computer check of the more than 27 million tickets sold found that only one had picked seven numbers from Wednesday night's drawing in the Super 7 game, spokeswoman Terry Champlin said.

The winner, who has not yet come forward, will receive 26 annual installments of $1.77 million, minus 20 percent federal withholding, spokeswoman Jane Shafer said.

On Wednesday, a record 27,662,192 tickets at $1 apiece were sold.

Greg Johnson

BG News/Mark Thalman

Johnson's attitude exemplifies BG/UT showdown

by Tom Skernivitz
assistant sports editor

Without players of the same mold as the Falcons' injured nose tackle, there would be no Rocket cheerleader jokes, no 20-mile relay races and not even an alumni smoker held in Luke's Barn.

Sure, the 52nd meeting between the two teams since 1919 makes for a historical grudge match. And the proximity of the two Northwest Ohio schools only helps add fuel to the fire which burns inside each Rocket and Falcon fanatic.

There's even material incentive involved. The winner of tomorrow's 1:30 p.m. game secures possession of the ever-so-cherished "Peacepipe," a traveling trophy which originated in 1948 as a basketball tradition.

But if the players don't walk out of their locker rooms with that certain feeling of utter contempt for the opposition, coupled with a blood-thirsting disposition, there just isn't a rivalry.

Greg Johnson has that kind of feeling.

"It's probably the biggest game of the year for both teams," Johnson said. "Between a Toledo game and a championship game, you don't get much bigger than that."

"It's kind of like being the father of your first born child. It's big."

Johnson may not be an expectant father, but he has labored through his share of pains this season. The Falcons' senior nose tackle suffered a torn tendon in the ring finger of his right hand and is also recuperating from a wrist injury.

Whether or not Johnson starts tomorrow is up in the air at the moment. But last year's first-team, All-Mid-American Conference player assures everyone number 92 will take the field at one point.

"This is Toledo Week — if you can't play against Toledo, you just can't play," Johnson said. "I doubt if I'll start, but I'll play."

Johnson could resort to bandaging his hands as many defensive linemen now do in college and professional football. But that would be immoral, taboo and unnatural for the 5-11, 235-pounder from Detroit's MacKenzie High.

"I just don't wear any pads," Johnson said. "I don't have a real good feel for the game when I have pads on. I feel like I'm a mummy."

BG coach Moe Ankney admitted his decision to play Johnson in the last two games (Ohio and Arizona) may have been rushed. Johnson said he will be upset if his coaches bench him tomorrow, but agrees his injury could make him more of a hindrance than help.

"If that's their decision, that's the decision I'm going to follow," Johnson said. "Whether I like it or not, I'll just have to take it with a grain of salt. To play with pain because you're bruised up — that's just football. But to play with something that's torn or broken — that's useless. You're just taking up space."

There is extra incentive involved for Johnson and the rest of "Moe-town's Greatest Hitters."

"Between a Toledo game and a championship game, you don't get much bigger than that. It's kind of like being the father of your first born child. It's big."

Falcons host Western in biggest match of season

by Andy Woodard
sports reporter

If one word could describe the Bowling Green — Western Michigan volleyball match, the word would probably be "big".

The reason: because this is a big match.

ference matches with their last MAC loss coming against Ball State in October of 1982. The five-time defending MAC champions are also ranked 18th in the nation in this week's top-20 poll.

Meanwhile, the Falcons, 15-4, have never beaten WMU since BG started a varsity program in 1976. However, the two squads

"This definitely a big match with Western," Van De Walle said. "We have never beaten them nor have we taken a game off of them in my five years here. This is the first time a BG team could do that."

Falcon outside hitter Jo Lynn Williamson said this match is what the team has been gearing for since the start of the season.

"This is definitely the biggest match of the year," she said. "We might be looked at as the underdog, but I think we can play as well as them. We've put in a lot of time and effort and practiced especially hard this week. We're ready."

BG outside hitter Jane Plantz said the winner of the match will also have the inside track on hosting the year-end, inaugural MAC volleyball tournament.

The squad which finishes first in the regular season will host the four-team tourney.

"I feel that this will definitely decide who wins the MAC," Plantz said. "With the first seed of the tourney playing the fourth seed and the second playing the

The two squads are tied for first place in the Mid-American Conference with 2-0 records and will be trying to remain there when they meet tonight at 7 p.m. in Anderson Arena.

The Broncos, 12-3, have won 78 consecutive Mid-American Conference matches with their last MAC loss coming against Ball State in October of 1982.

Meanwhile, the Falcons, 15-4, have never beaten WMU since BG started a varsity program in 1976. However, the two squads did tie once in 1979 when they only played a two-game match. BG coach Denise Van De Walle said she would like her team to be the one to end the conference win streak and put a "w" in the win column in the series history.

Icers face old friend turned foe

by Al Franco
sports reporter

The University of Toronto hockey team of the Ontario University Athletic Association crosses the border for its opening game with non-conference opponent Bowling Green.

BG hosts the UT Varsity Blues tonight and tomorrow at the BG Ice Arena. Both games are slated to start at 7:30 p.m.

Tonight's game counts in the standings for both squads, while Saturday's game is an exhibition. The NCAA rules permit a team to play only 38 games and one game against an international opponent. The problem BG faces is its game against Team USA on Nov. 16 is not considered an international outing. Therefore, BG had to drop a UT game because the Team USA game counts in the standings.

While the Falcons split their opening series with Michigan last week, UT has yet to take the ice in regular-season competition. The Blues were defeated Tuesday in an exhibition game against the University of Guelph, 14-4.

In three previous meetings, BG has a 2-1 edge. UT won the last outing as they defeated BG, 5-4, after three overtime periods in the finals of the College Hockey Classic held during 1985-86 season.

BG head coach Jerry York said that his team spent the last week working on its own game because they know little about UT.

"It's their (Toronto's) opening game of the year, so we really don't know a lot about them," York said. "We've taken the whole week of practice and concentrated on our execution."

The series is a homecoming of sorts for UT head coach Paul Titanic. Titanic played for the Falcons from 1975-79. He captained the squad during its 1978-79 Central Collegiate Hockey Association championship season. At BG, Titanic tallied 56 goals and 84 assists for 140 points which ranks 22nd on the Falcons all-time scoring list. "Certainly, I'm glad to be coming back," Titanic said. "I always liked playing for Bowling Green, and it was a great place to go to school."

To say UT has a young team would be an understatement, the Blues lost half their team to graduation as 12 of the 25 members from last season are gone.

Heading the attack for UT are four top returnees. Left winger Chris Callagan, defenseman Chris Vickers, and centers Rob Silc and Glen Murphy pace the squad. Silc scored 18 goals and 22 assists for 40 points, while Callagan (20-18-38), Murphy (14-17-31) and Vickers (2-13-15) should contribute.

Titanic said that his offense should be the stronghold of this year's squad.

"I would say our strengths are well-balanced forward lines," Titanic said. "We have four lines that are all equal. We have no prolific scorers, but we do have good balance."

The defense and goaltending seem to be a question mark. UT lost both of last season's starting and backup goaltenders.

"Our defense and goaltending are a little more untested," Titanic said. Titanic admitted that he didn't know that much about BG, but he is worried about the Falcons team speed.

"I know they have a lot of speed," Titanic said. "U.S. college teams usually have more speed than Canadian college teams," Titanic said. "BG always has good team speed and an explosive offense."

Going into tonight's game, BG is tied for third-place in the CCHA with Michigan and Illinois-Chicago. Western Michigan is in first place with a 2-0 record, while Michigan State is second, 1-0-1. Senior defenseman Scott Paluch and junior center Greg Parks lead the Falcons in scoring with four points apiece. Paluch has two goals and two assists while Parks has a goal and two assists. The two are just two points behind the CCHA leaders where Michigan State standouts Brian McReynolds and Kip Miller each have six points.

York said that junior left winger and Bowling Green native Steve Dickinson will see action Saturday. Dickinson suffered a shoulder injury last week. Sophomore Paul Connell will start in goal tonight, while freshman John Burke will get the nod Saturday.

Falcons end break; travel to Marquette

by Mark Huntebrinker
sports reporter

Bowling Green's soccer team, returning from a nine-day layoff, travels to Milwaukee Sunday to face Marquette University.

BG defeated Cleveland State in a "thriller" last Friday on a goal by junior fullback Jon Felton with 47 seconds left in the second overtime.

Falcon head coach Gary Palmisano said the break can work both ways.

"The break was good for us from the standpoint we had some time for some bumps and bruises to heal," Palmisano said. "Our main concern is not to lose our edge mentally and come out flat against Marquette."

The Falcons head to Milwaukee with some impressive credentials. BG is currently fourth in the Intercollegiate Soccer Association of America Great Lakes Region Poll. The booters also have the distinction of a number one ranking among college teams in Ohio.

With these impressive rankings, the Falcons have a realistic shot at a post-season tournament bid. Palmisano claims the Falcons need only to play within their ability the rest of the way.

"The players realize they are in control of their own destiny," he said. "We have to continue our early season effort and enthusiasm for the remaining five games."

The Falcons shouldn't need any big pre-game speech from Palmisano before Sunday's match. The Warriors defeated BG 1-0 in overtime last season. MU has an unimpressive record 6-7-1 this year, but MU and BG have posted similar results against common opponents.

back. They're all wearing blue and gold and have Rockets on their helmets," Johnson said.

The Falcons, who are currently a half-game behind Miami in the race for a MAC championship, have given up only seven points in their two wins this season. BG ranks seventh in the conference in total offense, leading Johnson to believe the game will be a defensive battle 'til the end.

"It's not going to be pretty," he said. "It will probably be a low-scoring game. I don't see a blowout either way."

"We have to control the line of scrimmage. You don't lose if they don't score."

Cagers hold intra-squad game

Bowling Green basketball coach Jim Larranaga has announced the Falcon cagers will participate in an intra-squad game Sunday at 7 p.m. The team, which began practicing yesterday, will hold the game in the Bowling Green High School gymnasium.

third, the first seed will be sitting easy in the first round."

The match itself will pit the Broncos superior height advantage and hitting ability against the Falcons steadily improving defense.

WMU starts a team of outside hitters Katharine Werme (6-3), JoAnn Bingham (6-2) and Lise Martin (6-0), middle blockers Lorie Maierhoffer (6-0) and Gale Church (6-2) and setter Andrea Pedrick (5-10). Outside hitter Lynda McLane (5-11) is the first player off the bench.

BG is coming off what Van De Walle said was there best defensive match of the season — a win over Eastern Michigan. In the three games, the Falcons made 56 digs and 14 total blocks.

Falcon outside hitter Sheri Fella said the team has worked on several new ways to contain the Bronco hitters.

"We've been working alot on different blocking schemes," Fella said. "We're keying in on Lise Martin, but other than that, we're going to play our defensive game. We're not going to change our (whole) game for them."

Plantz said the Broncos are not a true "team" because they are all looking out for their individual stats rather than each other.

"They rely totally on offense, because they are all tall, good hitters," she said. "I think they . . . lack team unity and they all play for themselves. Our defense needs to be good against them, because when we get the ball and hit back at them, we can score because their defense isn't the greatest."

Williamson agreed the Broncos lack team unity. She said the Falcons team-oriented play may be a key if the match goes a long way.

"We play well as a team, and I think playing together is better than their playing as individuals," the first-team All-MAC hitter said. "When the match gets tough and the heat is on, that is what will pay off for us."

On offense, BG setter Linda Popovich said she wants to pass the ball around to all of her teammates, as she did last Saturday against the Hurons. In the match she passed out 41 assists, including 16 to Williamson and 13 to outside hitter Jennifer Russell.

"I'm definitely looking to spread the ball around and keep their block moving," she said. "If we get predictable, then they will have an easier time blocking us."

WMU coach Rob Buck was unavailable for comment at press time because he said he was going out.

The Falcons host Ohio University tomorrow at 4 p.m. in another MAC match-up. BG defeated the Bobcats earlier in the year 15-5, 15-8, 15-4, in the West Virginia Tournament at West Virginia University.

The match will be the next to last of a nine-game home stand. Going into tonight's match, BG is 5-1 on the stand, with the only loss suffered in three games against Notre Dame. The Falcons' five wins all came in three games.

INXS looks forward to college performances

Band appreciates college support

by Judi Kopp

To promote its new album, INXS is "Kick"-ing off the first leg of its world tour with a stop in Bowling Green.

The group will perform at the University's Anderson Arena on Sunday, Oct. 18 at 7:30 p.m.

The band, formed about 10 years ago, is a sextet from Sydney, Australia. Tim Farriss, who plays guitar and synthesizer for the band, described how the group met.

"There are three brothers in the band, of which I'm one (also Jon and Andrew Farriss) and three non-brothers, and we grew up together," he said in a phone interview from East Lansing, Mich. "My two brothers went to school with Michael (Hutchence) and I went to school with Garry (Beers) and Kirk (Pengilly) and someone asked us to do a record.

"It was really a thrill to be playing with my brothers and we decided to stay together. We've been together ever since."

Originally called the Farriss Brothers, a manager thought the band should change its name. They considered "Excess," "In Excess" and "Into Excess."

"We toyed with the idea of being 'Inexcessible' — playing behind bars and never going to talk to the media. Then we decided we were too friendly and abandoned being 'Inexcessible' and settled on the abbreviation," Farriss said.

Because the band developed in the small pubs of Australia, the members enjoy playing in smaller arenas, especially to college crowds.

"We like the fact that the college kids supported us from the start. We could be sitting at home right on a beach in Australia," Farriss said. "This is our way of showing (the students) that we haven't forgotten about them and that we still appreciate their support."

Farriss believes that persistence and confidence are what it takes to "make it big," in both America and Australia. He also said there wasn't a big following of "heavy metal" artists down under.

"I think there's not a whole lot of difference between Australian and American audiences except maybe there's less people in Australia," he said with a laugh. "If you are into lots of makeup and spandex pants there aren't going to be that many people in Australia who will like you.

"You get over here and watch MTV and see so much of it (heavy metal) on television. It kind of makes me wonder."

Farriss said the band plans to spend about a year touring to promote this album. Touring has its definite advantages and disadvantages, he said.

"The few hours that we spend on stage

UAO members spent long hours planning show

by Bill Franciscy

When INXS hits the stage this Sunday, it will be the culmination of many long hours spent by dedicated University students.

Kate Stec, senior fashion merchandising major, is the person who initiated the event. As Director of Performing Arts for UAO, Stec was responsible for booking the show.

"I started this summer finding out if we could bring INXS," Stec said. "I wanted to get a college-oriented band and INXS definitely crosses over from mainstream to alternative."

"There's a lot involved with booking an act," she said. "You have to find out the dates they are available, the price range, and whether or not Anderson Arena is free those dates."

Stec added that once the group says "yes," it still is not a definite thing. "You just keep your fingers crossed," she said.

Once the show was booked, members of the performing arts committee began their work.

Ellen Boehm, senior psychology major, is in charge of catering for the show.

"Everything the band and crew want to eat is specified in the contract," Boehm said, "and they can change their minds whenever they feel like it."

"They originally asked for a catered dinner for 30 people where lamb would be served. The day after I confirmed the

Nun combines prayer with classes

by Diane Holland

One look will tell you she is not a traditional student. Sister Ann Francis, a junior art therapy major, balances two roles as a full-time student and a nun. She wears the modern dress of a nun, including a habit. Yet she also carries a backpack, the necessity of most college students.

Sister Ann believes it is important to learn how to interact and work with people. As part of her social work requirement, she volunteers at the Children Research Center, screening preschoolers at area schools for visual impairments.

ior art therapy major, balances two roles as a full-time student and a nun.

Sister Ann, who lives in St. Aloysius convent in Bowling Green, recently transferred here from Lourdes College in Sylvania. In the past, nuns had to teach classes during the day and attend college at night if they wanted a degree. Now, through financial help from the church community, Sister Ann can devote all her time to her studies.

During the day, she studies art therapy which she describes as a "healing therapy" through imagery and art. It is a way to help people, such as elderly and emotionally disturbed children, talk about their problems.

Sister Ann believes it is important to learn how to interact and work with people. As part of her social work requirement, she volunteers at the Children Research Center, screening preschoolers at area schools for visual impairments.

On campus, she doesn't feel as if she is any different from other students other than being an older student.

"They've all been pretty friendly," Sister Ann says of her classmates, although she is glad to see more older students on campus.

Although she didn't see Pope John Paul II on his recent visit to Detroit, she saw him several years ago when she was living in New York. The Pope was just a "white speck" at the bottom of Yankee Stadium, she said. Sister Ann said she had trouble describing the powerful feeling she had when surrounded by many people all involved in the liturgy, but she said the words "pretty awesome" would do.

Work remains to be done for rape prevention

by Audra Wilson

On-campus organizations are taking measures to prevent rape and create awareness throughout the year but several believe more needs to be done on the issue.

According to interfraternity council president Jim Thorpe, there is a push for national fraternities to recognize date rape as a relevant issue.

"The vast majority (of national fraternities) are trying to address the problem or at least create awareness," he said.

On the campus, IFC is also trying to address the issue of date rape. One of the programs IFC has held concerns male-female relationships in which date rape is addressed.

"Individual chapters should start doing more — not just one or two, but everyone," Thorpe said.

Another organization aware of rape problem at the University is Women for Women. The feminist organization addresses the issue of rape in several ways. They have sponsored films, programs and are currently putting together Rape Awareness Week.

"We won't forget any of the rapes that have occurred on this campus and we won't allow this issue to rest," according to Kristi Miller, a member of Women for Women.

As a group, members of Women for Women would like to see an increased understanding of date rape. They also want the University administration to take a more vocal stand against rape.

The Career and Counseling Development Center is also concerned with the issue of date rape.

According to Development Center psychologist Elizabeth Yarris, "Most rapes occur between acquaintances."

Yarris said she believes students should be better educated about gender roles and how people communicate according to those roles.

The Development Center offers personal counseling for rape victims and provides speakers for residence hall programs. Yarris said that in dealing with rape victims they try to cover both legal and medical matters depending upon the wishes of the victim.

The Link, although not a campus organization, also deals with the counseling aspects of rape by offering 24-hour crisis counseling for rape victims. The Link attempts to aid rape victims, their friends and family. It will also send a counselor out to talk to someone who has been sexually assaulted or go to the hospital at the rape victim's request. The Link works closely with campus by presenting programs to Campus Safety and Security.

Staff members of the Link never identify themselves by their full names. Debbie, full-time staff member and counselor, said

Friday/Paul Vernon

Sgt. Charlotte Starnes holds a sign which reminds students to use the escort service and the buddy system. Starnes is the coordinator of crime prevention on campus.

"We go in (to Campus Safety and Security and residence halls) periodically to do workshops. We're invited to come, we don't have to beat down the doors with a program."

She said the campus police are very supportive and have often gone beyond simple cooperation in their help with rape cases. However, she added that more needs to be done.

"Considering that the greater number of cases, especially on campus, are date and acquaintance rape, it is important to address the problem on campus as early as freshman year. Date rape awareness should be part of freshman orientation for parents and students," Debbie said.

Sgt. Charlotte R. Starnes, coordinator of crime prevention on campus, also said she believes educating students is important. Starnes' main emphasis is on prevention and what students can do to decrease the chance that they will be sexually assaulted. She said students should use the campus

Women for Women keep busy

by Jenny Heinlein

The club has a mailing list of approximately 500 people. It is active with anti-apartheid, anti-racism, rape, abortion and ERA activities. And many people don't even realize it exists. This organization is Women for Women.

The club started as People for People in 1969 and included some programs for women. In 1973 the University hosted a women's issue conference which was attended by women from all over the nation. Another women's conference was held in 1974. A group at the University applied for a general fee to become Women for Women and on the second try, was accepted.

In 1975, Women for Women was very non-structured, but from there it has evolved into what it is today.

Audra Wilson, a student and active member, stated that the organization arose because of the need to address the "issues on the campus from a feminist point of view."

From that point the club has grown to unknown proportions. There are many people who receive a monthly newsletter. Women for Women's activities are organized by a ten-person steering committee. These ten people meet once a week and are on the committee because they are the ones "who can dedicate the most time" Wilson said.

The group works closely with Amnesty International, the Peace Coalition and other activist groups on campus to help solve, or at least better, current problems such as the situation in Central America and apartheid.

Their purpose is not just to stop sexism, but "all the isms" according to Stephanie Lynch, a member of the group. That includes racism and heterosexuality.

The steering committee is operated in a collective sense. The members take turns taking notes and running the meeting.

"Each woman's voice is important...(we) try to become a collective voice...as women," Wilson said.

There are many different kinds of women, with different views, backgrounds, and reasons for being in the club.

"That's the essence of the group," Wilson said, "it's not a certain type of woman because it's every woman."

Some are considered radical. Some are falsely accused of being "man-hating lesbians." The fact is the group's membership includes undergraduates, faculty, community women and instructors, all with the common bond of feminism.

The organization would like to see more minority women in the group.

"It's hard to be white and middle class and say, 'I understand you'," Lynch said.

"We just want to promote feminist ideas and women's issues," Wilson added.

University Hostesses help coaches greet recruits

by Jenny Heinlein

The BGSU football team needs more than just skilled players. It needs a method of recruiting to insure the team will have quality players every year. University hostesses help with this process and because of them, coaches for the first time will have a hand in the high school recruiting process this year.

"I hope it goes well and I hope people understand. . . We're not setting recruits up with dates...this is no different than campus tours."

— Mike Mangili

The University hostess program was started this year in an effort to keep the coaches from having to do all the recruiting by themselves. Assistant Coach Mike Mangili and his wife Lauren are in charge of the program. Both came from the University of Arizona, where Lauren was a hostess.

To advertise the program, the Mangilis placed newspaper ads and distributed flyers in dorms. About 25 girls applied to be hostesses; 12 were accepted.

"We selected girls who are very outgoing because they'll be talking with strange kids," Mangili said.

The girls were interviewed and given a football quiz which hostesses Liz Arndt and Sue Samol called "easy."

Most of the hostesses this year are from the Cleveland area.

"We need girls from other areas," Mangili said. This would help the prospective player feel more at ease because he would be talking to someone who knew about the area where he lived.

Dressed in orange sweaters, the hostesses meet recruits and their parents at the stadium before football games. The hostesses take the recruits on a mini-tour of the campus, back to the stadium for the game, then to the locker room to meet the coaches.

During winter when recruits arrive for formal visits, the hostesses will take them to their appointments and help them around campus.

Both Arndt and Samol are public relations majors. They said the job is a form of public relations for the University.

"It would look great on a resume," Arndt said.

Mangili said the girls will be a big help to the coaches.

"They can help us with the personality evaluation of kids...they're extensions of our coaching staff," Mangili said.

University hostesses in the past have been labeled as an "escort service," and sometimes the groups tend to get bad reputations, according to a recent Sports Illustrated article.

"I hope it goes well and I hope people understand," Mangili said. "We're not setting recruits up with dates...this is no different than campus tours."

Mangili said if this year goes well, they'll have more girls next year. The interview process will probably be done in April so the hostesses will be ready for next fall.

"If this group goes well. . . we'll be a little more selective," Mangili said.

Open mind needed for New Music Festival

I had an interesting experience at a recent concert. I was sitting there minding my own business and enjoying music (as I am wont to do), when I noticed two music appreciation students seated in front of me. They were having trouble understanding the music so they were writing notes to each other.

One wrote "I can't even tell if he is playing the right notes!"

This would just be an uninteresting little anecdote if it wasn't for one thing: it was Bach. What is the lesson to be learned from all this? Don't worry about wrong notes. The last thing an audience member should be concerned with is wrong notes.

You may be wondering what this has to do with the New Music Festival. If you go to one of the new music concerts, and I recommend you do, you may suffer irreparable mental stress trying to figure out if the right notes are there.

You may wonder why new music can get away with such a scandal. Well, due to a series of scandals throughout music history, we now have a system of musical organization that allows almost anything to become music. There are all sorts of extreme examples of this anything-goes attitude. John Cage and his composition 4'33 (four minutes and thirty-three seconds of silence, the audience makes the music), and LaMonte Young's studies from the 1960s are also good examples (I like the one where the performer feeds the piano a bale of hay and a bucket of water, then the piano decides whether or not to eat and drink).

This takes us to a large philosophical question in music. What is music, and what is not music?

Music students have spent many a late-night arguing this question. And this question has also wrought quite a few mutinies in 20th-century music history classes.

Chicago art displayed at festival

The work of a school of artists known for their brash imagery will be showcased during the New Music and Art Festival which opens at the University's Fine Arts Gallery Friday, Oct. 23.

The exhibition "Of New Account: The Chicago Imagists," marks the eighth year the University has presented the festival but the first time the event has focused on both contemporary art and music.

Thirty pieces by eight originators of the Chicago Imagism movement will be represented in the exhibit. The artists, several of whom are internationally known, include Ed Paschke, Roger Brown, Art Green, Gladys Nilsson, Jim Nutt, Barbara Rossi, Karl Wirsum and Ray Yoshida.

What you need to realize before attending a new music concert is that anything may happen. An open mind is a good thing. This applies to musicians as well as the average person.

Enough of this theory, philosophy and general stuff. I feel like a high-school biology teacher berating you for giggling during the sex-education film. Here is some solid advice for this year's New Music Festival. Go.

Since there are eight concerts and nearly each piece on these concerts is by a different composer I can't tell you about each piece. I will tell you about two of the major concerts. Oct. 22, 8 p.m., Kobacker Hall — The Theatre Chamber Players of Kennedy Center will perform four pieces: two Bach works and two Gyorgy Ligeti compositions. Admission is charged. This should be a very interesting concert.

Gyorgy Ligeti (unless you are Italian don't even try to say it) is a little less well-known than Bach. To tell the truth I had never heard of him until a few weeks ago. Ligeti, born in 1923, is a noted teacher of music and quite a composer. Rather than trying to expound on something I know little about, I will give you a quote from an excellent book on Ligeti (my thanks to Dr. Vincent Corrigan for finding this and showing it to me).

In the early '60s I was also interested in other areas of form and expression, in a frantic, tormented quality of sound which may seem like a disorderly, wild gesticulation, haphazard and completely uncontrolled. At the time I was really trying to find ways of transforming this 'superexpressiveness' into something cool, as if to put such wild music gesticulating in a glass case, to see it as we see objects exhibited in a museum. (from Ligeti in Conversation Eulenburg Books, London 1983.)

The two Ligeti pieces are for small en-

Oct. 23, 9 p.m., Kobacker Hall — Joan Labarbara and Morton Subotnick will perform. Admission is free.

Labarbara is one of the most fantastic singers I have ever heard. She can do the most unusual things with her voice. She can sing (get this) more than one note at a time, and she can control each of the pitches separately. She also does circular

Cars go for live sound

by Larry McShane

NEW YORK (AP) — After three years apart and an assortment of solo projects, the Cars reunited to follow up their platinum smash, "Heartbeat City" — a project that relocated the band in London for most of a year.

"Door to Door" returns the Boston group somewhat to its bar-band roots, with two of the cuts dating back to a session for the band's first album and most of the songs done live in the studio, says songwriter-singer Ric Ocasek.

"Leave or Stay," the first cut done for the new album, "is a club song from our club days," Ocasek recalled in an interview at a Manhattan studio where the Cars were rehearsing for a world tour — their first shows since 1984.

"That song is like a trip into the past," said Ocasek, dressed in black from head to toe. "We used to open up the show with that in bars."

The song was recorded in one afternoon — an indication of the relaxed, speedy sessions which produced the new record in three months at a Manhattan studio, Ocasek said. A second song, "Ta Ta Wayo Wayo," also dates back to the late 1970s.

The sound on "Door to Door," while featuring less of the overdubs and electronics of the past, is still easily identifiable as the Cars.

For "Heartbeat City" they headed to Britain and worked with producer Mutt Lange for eight months. The resulting album produced four hit singles, but there was no rush to follow up.

In the three-year interim, Ocasek worked on his solo record, "This Side of

'The Princess Bride' pokes fun at fairy tales

by Craig Wagner

Remember the fairy tales we used to read and hear as children? The stories invariably were set in some far-off land, and the best ones had castles, monsters, sword-fighting heroes, and princes and princesses in them.

There are not many film adaptations of such fairy tales anymore because most movie-makers do not know how to present such stories to modern audiences. Director Rob Reiner is an exception. Reiner has produced a pure gem in the newly-released movie "The Princess Bride."

Reiner, son of comedian Carl Reiner, has directed some notable films in the past, among them "Stand By Me" in 1986. However, "The Princess Bride," written by William Goldman ("All the President's Men," "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid"), is one of the most original, charming, and funniest movies to come around in a long time.

The movie begins when a young boy bedridden with the flu (Fred Savage) is visited by his grandfather (Peter Falk). The boy is not exactly thrilled when his grandfather starts reading him a book, which his grandfather promises has "everything — fencing, fighting, torture, revenge, giants, monsters, chases, escapes, true love and miracles."

The story, set in the imaginary kingdom of Florin, unfolds before the boy's eyes as his grandfather reads.

Buttercup (Robin Wright) is one of the most beautiful women in the world, and the man she loves, Westley (Cary Elwes), is believed to have been killed at sea. After five years have passed with no sign of her lover, Buttercup reluctantly becomes engaged to Prince Humperdinck (Chris Sarandon), a ruthless man with few morals.

However, Buttercup is abducted by a small band of eccentric kidnappers — Inigo Montoya (Mandy Patinkin), Vizzini (Wallace Shawn), and Fezzik, who is played by professional wrestler Andre the Giant. The band is pursued by the prince's men and also by a mysterious hero wearing a black mask.

Not much more can be said about the plot without giving the entire story away, but what follows is a tale filled with adventure, revenge, romance, and humor.

The story also contains some highly unusual characters and creatures — a six-fingered sadist, an albino, Shrieking Eels and R.O.U.S. (Rodents of Unusual Size). Additionally, Billy Crystal makes a special appearance as Miracle Max, a salty old wizard, and Carol Kane (Latka's wife on "Taxi") is his nagging wife, Valerie.

The entire cast in "The Princess Bride" is simply superb. All the actors and actresses are convincing, and they are able to bring off the comedy in the film quite well. Crystal and Kane are excellent in the small scene they have together, which is dominated by a hilarious argument.

The interaction between Savage as the sick boy and Falk as the grandfather is also amusing. The impatient boy constantly interrupts his grandfather's telling of the story, asking if another "kissing scene" is coming up, or wondering what happens to a certain character. Eventually, the boy becomes more interested in the story and urges his grandfather to continue.

What makes "The Princess Bride" so appealing is its satirical edge. It is not just a movie about young lovers and sword fights, although the romance and adventure in this film would do well even without the humor. Reiner and Goldman constantly poke fun at the characters in the movie and the situations they get into. What results is an enchanting romantic adventure that is also extremely funny.

If there are any criticisms of "The Princess Bride," one is that it is quite violent at times. It may be too intense for very young children.

An instant classic, "The Princess Bride" is one of the best films of the year. Do not miss it — if you do, you are also missing out on a great time.

"The Princess Bride," rated PG, opens today at the Woodland Mall Cinema. Running time: 98 minutes.

Miracle Max (Billy Crystal) tries to revive the unconscious Westley (Cary Elwes) with the aid of his nagging wife Valerie (Carol Kane) as Fezzik (Andre the Giant) and Inigo Montoya (Mandy Patinkin) looks on in Act III Communications' "The Princess Bride" directed by Rob Reiner.

Comedy club offers relief from stress

by Craig Pyer

About this time each semester, classes start to get students down. That first set of mid-terms is over and many of us did not do nearly as well as we would have liked. Not to worry. There is a place nearby where students can go to enjoy a night of laughter: The Toledo Comedy Club. The club offers comic relief to an otherwise serious college life. It has a relaxed, humorous atmosphere and attracts comedians from as far away as New York and Los Angeles to entertain the audience with their stand-up comic routines.

The comedians make the audience part of the show. People sitting near the stage are treated specially as they become involved in the routines. Don't get too nervous though, it is all done in good taste. In fact, it is quite a privilege to be singled out by the comedians.

The club is open nightly Tuesday through Saturday. Tuesday through Thursday there is one show at 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday, there are two shows at 8 and 10 p.m.

Owner Al Esever calls Tuesday "open mike night."

"Anyone who wants to, can get up (on stage) and be funny for seven minutes," Esever said.

Wednesday is college ID night when students are admitted for $1 with a current student ID. However, patrons must be of legal drinking age. The Toledo Comedy Club, located at 5319 Heatherdowns Road, is an independent operation and the only one of its kind in northwest Ohio.

Friday/Jim Youll

Comedian Dave Heenan performs at the Toledo Comedy Club.

Brandos' 'Honor Among Thieves' sounds very familiar

by Bill Hollister

Sunday's concert will be opened by a New Jersey-based modern guitar-rock band, The Brandos. Their debut lp, "Honor Among Thieves" is an interesting collection lyrically based on some strong but real-life problems: war, wife battering, loneliness, and killers on the loose.

Their sound is familiar. They resemble such college radio favorites as The Del-Lords and The Bo-Deans and clearly draw influence from '60s artists such as Cree-are great, but the time in between shows is drudgery," he said. "It's a drag: packing up a suitcase and getting on a plane or a train. But the whole reason we do it is because we like to play."

Farriss said INXS supports charitable organizations like Live Aid, the Prince's Trust Foundation, Greenpeace and Stop The Drop, a nuclear disarmament organization, but the band's music is not supposed to give heavy political overtones.

"Our songs have subtle messages. Every once in a while there is an occasional direct message. On the new album we have two songs called "Guns In The Sky," and "Calling All Nations." I guess the titles explain themselves," he said.

"Kick" is shipping a lot of records, Farriss said, which is exciting. He believed the new album is better than previous ones be-

"It's (the album) recorded digitally and the songs were recorded at different times. The band also wrote most of the songs," he said. "We also had a lot to do with the cover art on the album and the concert t-shirts and posters."

"I think the album is better, and that makes it different."

"We are also glad the album is doing well because the more people who like the music we love, the better we feel about it, the music and touring and all," he said.

Farriss said he doesn't know what the future holds for INXS, but that the group intends to keep recording albums and playing. Farriss also wants to continue living in Australia.

"Living in Australia tends to be the way I get my objectivity from the rest of the world. I think we intend to keep going until we get what we want. I guess when we do that we'll be happy."

caterer, we got a revision of the rider in which they wanted beef brisket," she said.

Boehm is not the only worker who faced headaches while planning for the show.

Scott Simmons, junior marketing major, is in charge of promoting the show.

"We had some really sharp posters made for the concert, but almost as soon as they were put up, they were ripped off," Simmons said.

Simmons said the placing of radio and newspaper ads went fairly well except for one incident.

"93Q was supposed to officially announce the show and all the details, but the night before the announcement, FM-104 mentioned the show over the air," he said.

"Factline was getting calls asking for the details and they had to tell them to wait until the next day," Simmons said. "It was an innocent mistake, but it was frustrating."

Scott Henricks, a junior majoring in education for the hearing impaired, is coordinating staging and security. "I've put in six to seven hours a day weeks before the concert," Henricks said.

"There are tons of things that need to be done," he said. "We have to take care of staging, security, parking, lights, and dressing rooms."

"If there is a problem, we have to go through our agent who goes through the band's agent. Basically, a lot of time is spent on the phone," Henricks said.

Kat Nowak, senior administrative management major, is in charge of worker coordination.

"I have to figure out how many ushers,

Many of the "new" bands seem to be driving on that R.E.M.-paved road and are reluctant to turn off and make their own path. A good producer and little experience could put this band on the map.

"I have to make sure everyone is where they should be, doing what they should be doing. I have to see that everything runs smoothly so there is no trouble."

richest nations, particularly in North America and Western Europe, of ignoring the plight of political refugees and turning away refugees in increasing numbers.

Worldwide, 743 prisoners were known to have been executed in 39 countries and 1,272 were sentenced to death in 67 countries, the report said. It said the figures represent only documented executions and that the actual number was "certainly higher."

The 1987 survey gives a country-by-country accounting of work by Amnesty International's more than 500,000 volunteers last year. It said omission of some countries did not necessarily indicate an absence of human rights violations but could reflect a lack of information.

The survey noted improvements during 1986 in the human rights records of several countries, notably the Philippines, Uganda, Zimbabwe, Zaire and Guatemala, but it did not attempt to identify a worldwide trend.

In a report on alleged ill treatment of prisoners in the United States, the survey said Amnesty International had expressed concern to U.S. authorities over the death of Vinson Harris, who perished near a federal prison in Butner, N.C.

"A North Carolina coroner established that Vinson Harris had died of asphyxiation after guards had tightly wrapped his head, neck and face in bandages while he was being transported by bus to a federal prison in March 1986," it said.

The survey also reported allegations that inmates of the penitentiary at Marion, Ill., were beaten by guards during a "lock-down" in November 1983 following the killing of two prison guards by inmates.

The report added: "Amnesty International wrote to the (U.S.) authorities expressing concern that U.S. military assistance to the irregular armed forces (Contras) opposing the government of Nicaragua may have contributed directly to killings, abduction and torture by those forces."

Commenting on Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or openness on selected topics, the survey welcomed plans to publish Soviet crime statistics regularly for the first time since 1934.

But it said conditions in prisons and collective labor colonies where most prisoners of conscience were held remained poor.

"Prisoners were kept on monotonous, meager rations with only rudimentary medical care, and had to meet excessively high work targets often involving heavy physical labor," it said.

Paradise"; bassist-vocalist Benjamin Orr released his successful album "The Lace"; guitarist Elliot Easton completed his solo "Change No Change" LP; keyboardist Greg Hawkes composed a pair of film scores; and drummer David Robinson worked on tracks with Semper Fi, a local Boston band.

Once reassembled, "everybody was thoroughly enthusiastic about coming back and making the records," said Ocasek. "It seemed like just yesterday we had started the band."

Despite all the songwriters in the band, Ocasek wrote all the material for "Door to Door" — a task he's handled since the Cars' debut album in 1978.

"There is always something (students) can do to prevent crime from happening," Starnes said.

Starnes' job is to make students aware of what they can do to prevent crimes such as sexual assault. According to Starnes, the institution of emergency phones and the 911 emergency number are just a few of the prevention measures which have been taken.

Campus Police will also send officers out to make presentations in the residence halls using videos and open discussions.

Rape programming has increased through a number of presentation options available to residence halls. Barbara Keller, director of residence education, said she believes this is a positive step in increasing awareness. Keller added she would also like to see increased programming on the men's floors.

"We should sensitize men to be supportive of women and their experiences," Keller said.

Rape awareness is also stressed in the resident advisor training classes. Both first and second year RAs address the issue of rape and residence hall living. The first-year class has had speakers address the issue of rape. Second-year RA classes make up their own workshops about topics, such as date rape, and present it to other RAs who may benefit.

"Over the years, campus consciousness has been raised to some degree. There are some measures being taken, however, there is still a lot that needs to be done," according to Margaret Weinberger, coordinator of the Women's Studies program.
